Course Description

This is an undergraduate course in international economics. International economics is about how nations interact through: trade of goods and services, flows of money, and investment. International economics is an old subject, but continues to grow in importance as countries become tied more into the international economy. Nations are now more closely linked than ever before. This course provides an introduction to the theory of international trade and international monetary economics. The theoretical background is used as a basis for discussion of policy issues. We will cover gains from trade, patterns of international trade and production; tariffs, and other impediments to trade; effects of government policies on trade, balance of payments, and as time allows, foreign exchange markets, capital flows, and coordination of monetary and fiscal policy in a global economy.
